IS THE STARRY SKY ABOVE YOUR HEAD? (REVISITING THE MEANING OF I. KANT'S FAMOUS STATEMENT)

The authors of the article refer to I. Kant's famous statement about the starry sky, which completes the philosopher's "The Critique of Practical Reason." The article seeks to show how and why the attitude to the idea contained in the Kantian aphorism was changed. The article is aimed at clarifying the meanings that the phenomenon of the starry sky brings to the human life-world and culture being.

It is shown that the philosophical image-percept of the starry sky is stable subject reference which visually involves limiting abstraction of the whole. Starry sky turns our thoughts to the ontological, philosophical-anthropological, ethical and aesthetic limits. It puts our mind at the level of the universal. Despite the specific contexts of the historical eras, "space of culture" and "moral space" of a person are based on the constant reference to these limits, even though it is expressed in different symbolic forms.

Keywords: starry sky, metaphysics, life-world, the Absolute, meaning, symbol.

NATURAL-GEOGRAPHIC FACTORS OF SPIRITUAL LIFE LIMITATION IN RUSSIA

This article discusses the influence of natural-geographic factors on images of cognition and creation in Russian spiritual culture. The author considers that such adverse natural-geographic conditions in Russia as frigid climate, low crop yield, openness to irregular external aggression, monotone landscapes etc. form the negation of 'project' way of thinking and systematic land arrangement. This negation indirectly restricts the freedom of spiritual life. Extreme unpredictability of geopolitical and nature's challenges cut off by immense space of communications, lack of cultural rivalry and body-rootedness form a unique mentality, which might be termed "nuanced" or "limited".

Keywords: Russian culture, limitation, spirituality, nature, climate, landscape, cognition, creation, corporeity.

THE SACRED AND THE PROFANE IN THE OPERA INTERPRETATION OF CULTURAL CONFLICT

In modern cultural process not only mass but also an elitist culture that, in particular, finds expression in the development of the performing component of the opera are actualized. The elitism of the opera is associated with the canonization of its form which contributes to the preservation of cultural traditions and ideals of the culture. As a symbiosis of different types of art, opera has an internal conflict that facilitates the identification of its hidden opportunities. The article considers aspects of the symbiosis of music and words in the opera: the influence of the literary text on the birth of music and the role of music in the literary text presentation. The authors referred to the classic Italian, French and Russian opera.

Keywords: culture, sacred, profane, conflict, opera, music, word, vocals.

PEASANTS IN BASHKIRIA DURING THE GREAT PATRIOTIC WAR: LESSONS OF PATRIOTISM

The article discusses the development of the patriotic movement among collective farmers of Bashkiria during the Great Patriotic War. The contribution of peasantry of the Republic to the defense fund of the country, including the enormous financial, material resources, labor heroism of the Soviet people, is represented. It is noted that mass-campaigning, advocacy and application of strict administrative methods of implementing these measures played a major role in raising funds for the front line. However, understanding the urgency of the victims at the expense of personal interests was massive, and not a single phenomenon. Patriotism of the peasantry was based on the mental attitudes formed over centuries and related to the cultural and historical memory of the people, for whom the protection of the Fatherland was considered one of the top priorities. Patriotism was an integral part of the value system of the Soviet society.

"MAN-MIGRATORY": THE CONCEPT OF "EXODUS-WAY-FINDING" IN THE PEASANT MOVEMENTS OF THE SECOND HALF OF XIX -EARLY XX CENTURIES

The article evaluates the possibilities of using new approaches to understanding the content of the resettlement process, as well as the formation and implementation of the migration mobility of the peasantry. The assumption, according to which the proposed research model of the confessional migration may become universal in discovering the logic of peasant movements, is discussed. The study found that the concept of "Exodus-Way-Finding place" in the old resettlement was characterized by internal unity and germinated on eschatological soil. In the Russian orthodox migrant segment this unity was replaced by the utilitarian justifications. However, the desire to preserve the class identity among the Russian orthodox peasants, with amendments, may contribute to the inclusion of this social category in the proposed scheme.

Keywords: confessional migration, migration movement, the old believers, Russian orthodox peasants.
